Title Star Wars Warlords Entries _____

After the battle of Jakku, the Galactic Empire has officially collapsed. Darth Vader and Emperor Palpatine have been dead for more than a year now, and this battle would officially mark the destruction of the Empire.

Soon, the Empire would be split into multiple factions led by different warlords, all of which were fighting for control of the galaxy.

Shea'h Mulic was a young stormtrooper that had just suffered some of the worst fighting during the battle of Endor and the battle of Jakku. For his whole life, all he had known was war, and he had grown up believing that his service to the Empire was for a good and noble cause. Now, Mulic returned back home to find that the life he had known was completely destroyed.

Because of his bravery during the Galactic civil war, Mulic was command of a large squadron of the former Imperial Army. Now, Mulic would make it his life's mission to reunite the Empire, defeat the rebels (now the New Republic), and restore the glory of a fallen empire.

Mulic was able to have success with establishing himself as a warlord. Through his military strategy and prowess, Mulic was able to bring most of the Outer Rim and Mid Rim under his control. He now set his sights on conquering the core worlds, and once again making sure that Coruscant would be under Imperial control. However, his plans would seemingly be cut short, as Luke Skywalker and a large regiment of New Republic forces were moving towards the Mid Rim in an attempt to bring peace to the Galaxy.

In addition, the cunning and experienced Grand Admiral Thrawn had also been advancing towards the planets under Mulic's control. Thrawn was also seeking to re-unite the Empire, and at the time had one of the most powerful armies in the galaxy. Faced with Luke Skywalker moving in from the east, and Thrawn moving in from the West, Mulic now had to get ready to defend his territory, and assert his faction's sovereignty.

Once the first New Republic forces reached the Imperial base commanded by Mulic, intense fighting broke out. Over the course of a few days, some of the most ferocious fighting occurred, only ending once the Imperial army had successfully defended their position. This victory came with a price however, as half of Mulic's forces were either killed or wounded. It was after this battle that Mulic felt a really intense connection to the Force, and suddenly he was able to heal some of his men. Mulic was really scared by this realization that he might be force sensitive. For most of his life, Mulic had always been taught that the Jedi were evil, and that any connection to the force is forbidden for a stormtrooper. During the Galactic Civil War, Mulic had realized that he could read minds, move objects just by thinking, and even having the ability to seemingly escape impossible situations. Mulic had always thought that something was wrong with him, and desperately tried to repress his abilities. Now, Mulic was experiencing a connection with the Force stronger than he had ever experienced. He was now stuck at a crossroads between everything he once thought he knew, and his new abilities. For the first time in his life, he began to question himself, the Empire, and even the cause in which he was fighting for.

To make matters worse, Mulic was now expecting the rest of Skywalker's regiment to come and completely wipe out his forces. It was at this time of personal struggle that Mulic had to prepare for the upcoming battle. All alone, he manned one of the lookout positions. After all, the one thing he knew was war, and it was the one thing that kept him sane through this turbulent period of time.

The New Republic forces eventually did arrive, and after some fierce fighting, Mulic knew that his forces had lost. Mulic was about to surrender, but then he saw Luke Skywalker walking around all alone. Mulic thought about making an attempt to take Skywalker's life, but just as he began to move, Luke immediately pulled Mulic's blaster rifle away from him using the Force. Luke told Mulic that he didn't want to come to this base as enemies, but rather, he wished that they could put aside their differences and work together to fight off Thrawn's approaching army. In addition, Luke also told Mulic that the Force is strong on this planet, and that this planet seems to hold the key to the late Emperor Palpatine's contingency plan. Luke would need Mulic's help to find the first clue in solving this mystery. Mulic, feeling as if he had no choice, eventually helped Luke find a Sith Wayfinder device, which would be one of the keys in locating Palpatine's cloning facilities. After their brief friendly exchange, Mulic asked Luke what was to happen next. After all, Mulic still considered the New Republic to be a group of rebels, and still sought to bring back the Empire. Luke told Mulic to follow his truest desire, and that everyone has a choice to make. Mulic first thought that Luke meant joining the New Republic, but Luke shook his head. "No, everyone has a choice to do better, to be a better person, and to create a better world around them." Luke then told Mulic he knew that he was strong in the Force and that he should not be afraid of who he truly was. Luke also offered Mulic the opportunity to train as his apprentice, and told Mulic of his plan to restore the Jedi Order, and to maintain peace and stability in the galaxy. Mulic was completely shocked, but after the passage of many days, he agreed. Mulic would now help Luke prepare for a final series of battles against the Grand Admiral Thrawn. After Thrawn was defeated, it would truly be the end of the Imperial Remnant, and a new start for the galaxy. It would also be the start of Mulic's new life as a Jedi apprentice.
